

The Sea-Tac strip

The Sea-Tac strip is now called International Boulevard. The name change was part of an effort by the now-incorporated city of SeaTac to rid itself of the image of a piece of real estate where prostitution had a heyday in the early 1980s.

Pacific Highway South
 Young women began disappearing from what was then called Pacific Highway South but was dubbed by police and the denizens of the highway as the Sea-Tac strip. Many of the women who disappeared were victims of the Green River killer.
